Products that work harder for you

You pride yourself on a lively dining program – so you need tableware built for the everyday hustle and bustle of senior living and healthcare settings. Our wide selection of durable drinkware, dinnerware and serveware is ideal for high-volume and outdoor environments and can stand up to drops, dishwashers and day-to-day wear and tear.

Infinium® premium plastic drinkware is a lightweight glassware substitute that ensures you'll never sacrifice beauty for durability. With a glasslike appearance and dozens of shapes to choose from, Infinium® is practically unbreakable, easy to carry, and resistant to cracks, stains and odors.

Infinium® Wake™ brings stackable options into the mix, making bussing and storage more efficient. Its distinctive textured design is easy to grip, so your residents can drink more confidently, with reduced risk of dropping and breakage.

Melamine

Melamine is another highly durable, lightweight choice for busy senior living and healthcare settings that offers a high-end experience wherever it goes. Our easy-to-wash melamine dinnerware offers bright contrast with an array of bold colors, while melamine serving trays mimic wood, slate and marble for an elegant buffet or table service. Their faux finishes make a statement while making serving easy for your staff.

 Look for this icon on all melamine products.

Resident safety is your No. 1 priority.

From dining service to buffets and in-room service, food safety challenges can jeopardize your reputation and success. Luckily, there are steps you can take to create safe and enjoyable dining experiences for your residents.

Regular training

Educating staff on proper hand-washing, cross-contamination and food safety is essential for preventing mishaps. Training should happen even before a new employee steps into the kitchen or dining room floor, with regular updates for changing guidelines.

Safe food handling

Diligence ensures that food is at its freshest and won't make residents sick. Key priorities are checking food temperatures regularly, covering, labeling and dating all refrigerated items, refraining from cross-contamination of meat and produce, and outfitting all staff with proper PPE.

Proper dishwashing

Dishwashing is so much more than “cleaning” dishes. Show staff how to properly sanitize dishes using the correct water temperature and concentration of sanitizing solution to prevent the growth of bacteria.

Dietary restrictions

Many seniors are on limited or special diets – low-salt, low-sugar or soft foods – or deal with food allergies. By communicating with residents and caregivers to align the menu to their needs, you can improve enjoyment of the meal and residents' overall health.

Colorful plates, confident diners

Could the color of your dinnerware improve your residents' nutrition? A 2004 Boston University study found that patients with advanced Alzheimer's ate 25% more from a red plate than they did from a white one – suggesting that the contrast between food and plate acts as a visual aid for diners with special needs.

With a range of bold and calming colors to choose from, we can help you create presentations that are not only beautiful, but that give your residents increased confidence at the table.
